AMILLONSONS 'THE LION SLIPS TONIGHT' (SHIVA RECORDS)

After two years serving community service order by dressing up as peasants for fruit tossing tourists Nottingham favourites amillionsons have returned to the fray with a limited edition download bootleg set to get ya hips a swaying and your head a nodding all summer long. The result of an unlikely and some would say twisted combination of beautifully coiffeured 70's strummer Andrew Gold and the legendary empress of African music Miriam Makeba, "THE LION SLIPS TONIGHT" evokes warm days and cold beer. It's their first release since the critically acclaimed album "The First One's Free" in 2005, and is sure to attract interest from their previous supporters including Rob Da Bank, Chris Coco, Annie Mac and XFM's Eddy Temple Morris,

BBC Review

The excellent Shiva Records kick off 2005 with the long awaited debut album from...

Jack Smith 2005

2005 is turning into a very good year for Nottingham's Shiva label: in A Hot Trip To Heaven, Neon Heights recently delivered an album that is instinctively groovy that oozes heartfelt passion; least we forget last summer's 24 Hour Psychedelic Freakout from stable mates Crazy Penis - an accord of blissful creativity, and yet more evidence as to why they're fast becoming one of the most exciting bands to emerge from the British dance scene since Massive Attack.

There certainly must be something in the waters that flow from the River Trent as there's now another future classic to add to the list with amillionsons' lush orchestrated arrangements and quirky mash-ups that sit in juxtaposition on their debut long-player, The First One's Free.

Having made us go all gooey with their sublime reading of Dorothy Moore's '70s transatlantic hit "Misti Blu" (featuring a surprisingly soulful Taka Boom), they then released their acclaimed "Sonblock EP" that housed "Outta My Head", a chunky lite-breaks number with sampled strings and a sultry female lead thrown into the melting pot. It was the obvious standout alongside the downlow "Stay Off The Dope", complete with cut-ups of The Simpsons theme in a fashion that wouldn't sound out of place on a Coldcut radio show.

Both are featured here, as is the new single, "Summer Song", which further draws on chilled beats and tranquil musicianship that work well together, further highlighting why the trio are fast becoming the dons of eclectic Brit cool. Obscure samples link the tracks, while the grooves range from lounge-core and swinging jazz to chilled breaks - "Outta My Head" (even borrowing the chorus line from Luther Vandross's "Goin' Out Of My Head") to further add to the voyage of discovery.

If you're looking for comparisons think the Art Of Noise - not least thanks to the "Moments In Love" -inspired "Need You Tonight" - a sublime slice lazily soulfulness awashed with occasional string flurries. While The First One's Free may not quite reach the same critical acclaim as their fellow label companions, amillionsons are nevertheless standing on the edge of a wonderful future.

Their music exudes a rare blend of originality, sultriness and carefree innocence that's all too missing in today's over-produced and mass-marketed scene, and for that we give kudos.

BOOTLEG

'A Bad Production'

Reportedly a collaboration between two of the best things to come out of Nottingham since Stuart Pearce – namely Neon Heights and Amillionsons. This crafty 7" has been flying out of the more discerning record shops in the past few months. It's a Tekken-like battle between two giants, Mary J Blige and The Beatles.

VITAL RELEASE

AMILLIONSONS SonBlock EP (white label)

The follow up to the awesome hit single 'Mistl Blu' is a four-track EP. The lead track, 'Outta My Head' samples another old female vocal in an up-tempo, back room-friendly style, and would also sound cool on daytime radio. 'Underground Night Music' is an electro number that uses one of those Speak And Spell toys and falls just the wrong side of the invisible cheese line. Things look up again on the flip though. 'Stay Off The Dope', which has been around for a while on a very limited white, is a funky cut-up that nods its head to old school hip hop and works well in a lounge set. But best of all is 'Fuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuckfuck', which takes the cool hooks from a pile of Seventies and Eighties easy listening and soft rock tunes and turns them into a 21st Century masterpiece. (CC)

Steve McLay gets to grips with the new Midlands house sensation

With everything in life, there's always the away. In the summer of 2004, Steve McLay got to grips with the new Midlands house sensation A Million Sons Misti Blu White Label. Very limited and cool as fuck, the house sound of Nottingham continues to mutate into something seriously differen. Chosse from the deliciously downtempo samplesoul of the original, Schmoov's typically groovesome Naked-esque rub, Souldoubt's techy twist or Neon Heights' busted-up beats: all four will have the 'spotters' reporting for duty at the decks sooner than you can quote Kevorkian's home phone number. CG

Dorothy Moore's classic erection section anthem gets a deep house re-rub. The lady's soulful angst works a treat on the deep groove, and while soul boys will no doubt have a wry smile, the floor will just dig its bottomless soul. (TF)
